November in the Garden

As the temperature continues to descend, plants are being conditioned to tolerate winter's chill. The conditioning also works on people, too, but many of us fight it. Sweet gum trees (Liquidambar species) are a bit like us in that respect. Read more on our blog.

Shop & Garden Centre November Update

Our workshop volunteers have been crafting the loveliest creative dried flower arrangements using seed pods, dried hydrangea, strawflowers and a myriad of magical materials from the Garden. Please come in and have a look...perfect for folks who want a low-maintenance bit of nature anywhere in the home!

We have amazing, affordably priced scarves made from materials farmed in an ecologically sustainable way. These silk and linen blends feel wonderful against your skin and come in juicy saturated shades of vermilion, cocoa, eggplant, cornflower blue and fuchsia. Pick one up today and know that you're supporting a worthwhile women's collective in Vietnam. Learn more.
