Rhododendron fortunei subsp. discolor

April in the Garden

There are some four hundred different kinds of rhododendrons in UBC Botanical Garden's collections. Most of them flower in April, so I thought it appropriate to make this month's offering include a few of them. But rather than focus on the enormous diversity, this month's blog features only tree-sized rhododendrons, a number of which are exceptionally well-budded and ready to explode into bloom.
